When you said, "I know a guy I want to connect you with," I didn't realize just how much that would matter. It truly shaped our relationship and helped it evolve. And we'll stay in touch—this is a relationship that will continue. It was really meaningful...what [Reyad] brought in was a perspective that our shared cultural background allowed him to offer. He was able to point out things I might not have seen, or that others may not have said, which helped me put more in context.
